16. Learning and Teaching Strategies and Methods

- Information about the area studied is conveyed through a combination of lectures, seminars, discussion classes or tutorials. This allows for whole-class teaching, small group projects and individual work.
- Lectures are used to communicate information and introduce key themes.
- Discussion classes and seminar sessions offer an opportunity for students to apply the knowledge that they have acquired in order to explain and analyse situations. Students are expected to prepare in advance selected readings which are provided on the VLE.
- At FHEQ Level 4, priority is given to introducing the student to the disciplines and areas of study through directed learning and guided tasks. These complement the lecture programme and prepare students for conducting independent research using a range of sources; monitoring their progress and managing their time. Group-oriented tasks prepare students for working effectively as a team and engaging in peer learning.
- At FHEQ Level 5, students are encouraged to work increasingly independently though still under tutor guidance. In addition to the lecture and seminar programme, students engage in individual and/or small group projects or case studies in order to pursue their own interests within the broader framework of the programme.

- By FHEQ 6, students are expected to be working more independently, specialising in particular aspects of their programme in greater depth.
- Source materials are available to students in English. These include written texts, on-line materials, video and audio materials.

At all levels, discussion classes and seminar sessions offer an opportunity for students to develop intellectual skills by testing out ideas, and applying the knowledge that they have acquired in order to explain and analyse situations. Workshops will deal with interpreting primary source materials, document analysis, historiographical issues, statistics, literature, film and popular memory.

Students are expected to prepare in advance selected readings and secondary source materials which are provided on the VLE. This requires incisive reading of a variety of materials, identifying theoretical approaches, key arguments and issues; synthesising the information to present a coherent argument.

The full range of receptive (reading, listening) and productive (writing, speaking) language skills are developed in a variety of learning contexts: classes delivered in the target language; language laboratory classes and independent work; access to printed, audio-visual and audio materials in the target language (video, tapes, television, press, film and other forms of cultural production). These are employed at all levels.

At all levels students are expected to undertake directed, private study using on-line materials, and reference sources for grammar and vocabulary. There is extensive provision for independent language learning on the VLE and in the Learning Resources Centre.

The period of residence abroad at FHEQ 6 makes a significant contribution to the development and enhancement of language skills and inter-cultural awareness.

A wide range of transferable skills which enhance academic performance and promote employability among graduates are implicit and explicit within the teaching and learning strategies of degree programmes comprising Area Studies. Many of these have been identified in the above sections but some benefit from specific mention.

- Academic study skills and basic research skills are embedded in the core units Studying at University and Starting Language Research at level 4 in the Autumn & Spring Terms. The full range of these skills is noted above in Sections A, B, and C and are developed thoroughly in core and optional units throughout the programme.
- Tutorials in FHEQ 4 facilitate the setting and monitoring of learning objectives; these are developed further in FHEQ 5 in preparation for the dissertation, and during the production of the research project or dissertation in FHEQ 6.
- In the final year, working on the dissertation enables students to develop skills in project and time management, organisation, independent working and self-discipline.
- Many units foster team working skills through seminar work, discussion classes, and presentations.

In addition to the above, students on the MFL with ITT pathway will encounter a variety of learning and teaching strategies and methods in the School of Education and Childhood Studies (SECS) including lectures, seminars and individual tutorial sessions. Taught sessions will be supplemented by input from trained mentors, self-supported study tasks and school based practice.

17. Assessment Strategy

All assessment strategies and assessment loads for units on this programme conform to the requirements of the Curriculum Framework Document and the December 2015 Policy on Maximum Assessment Loads. FHEQ Level 4, work is assessed primarily through 1500 word essays, plus other combinations of assessment including presentations (individual or group), posters, in class tests, or examinations of varying duration (60 minutes; 90 minutes; 120 minutes). The length of essays may extend to 2500 words in combination with fewer of the other assessment modes outlined above. Alternatively, some units may assess by examination only (3 hours) or entirely by coursework (4000 words). For FHEQ Level 4, assessment loads towards the lower end is usually the norm. FHEQ Level 5 is assessed through longer essays (up to 4000 words) in combination with individual and/or group presentations, reports, projects or case studies, in class tests and examinations of varying duration (60 minutes; 90 minutes; 120 minutes). Alternatively, some units may opt to assess entirely by coursework with portfolios or other artefacts (up to 4000 words), or solely through examinations (up to 3 hours). The same provision is made for assessment at FHEQ Level 6 but in addition, students are required to undertake a dissertation (10,000 words). There is a strong emphasis on building in formative assessment at all levels, but most especially at FHEQ Level 4, to facilitate constructive 'feed-forward' from academic staff to students.

A range of assessment types are used at all levels to assess subject specific and practical skills. In particular, with reference to a range of issues these include assessments involving primary document analysis, critical commentaries, interpretation of media representations, application and interpretation of statistical data, and critical readings of cultural artefacts. With regard to the target language, the full range of receptive (reading, listening) and productive (writing, speaking) language skills are assessed at all grades through a variety of oral and text-based assignments, including individual and/or group presentations, interviews under exam conditions; reading and listening comprehension, essays, summaries, reports, written examinations.

The assessment methods described in Sections A, B, C demonstrate the development and achievement of the range of graduate and employability skills indicated in Section D. These are embedded in the units and consequently provide an accumulation of opportunities for students over the duration of their programme of study. However, some assessment forms such as the dissertation, the research project, group projects, presentations or posters, essays and reports merit particular mention.

In addition to the above, students on the MFL with ITT pathway may be assessed through both formative assessment records and summative assignments which are designed to enable trainee teachers to demonstrate their knowledge and understanding as well as their intellectual and transferable skills. There will also be observation and assessment of school based practice.

18. Course Structure, Progression and Award Requirements

See Unit Web Search¹ for full details on the course structure and units

One credit is equivalent to 10 hours of learning. Units are offered as 20 credits and the final year dissertation is worth 40 credits. Each level comprises of a minimum of 120 credits.

BA (Hons) French / German / Spanish / Spanish & Latin American Studies Single Honours are four year programmes.

The four year Single Honours programmes, above, are additionally offered in three year mode, with study or a work placement abroad undertaken during the Autumn Term of Level 6.

BA (Hons) Combined Modern Languages (two from French, German, Spanish, Mandarin Chinese and English) is a four year programme. The single honours and combined modern languages programmes have a compulsory year of study or work placement abroad between levels 5 and 6.

Students taking Mandarin will be required to spend one academic year in China; they will be expected to spend no less than 4 months studying or working in the country of their other language of study. This can be done during the summer months between level 4 and 5, or 5 and 6.

19. Employability Statement

Employability skills will be delivered (and assessed where applicable) throughout the curriculum, with structured support between Level 4 and Level 6. Core units at each level will include opportunities to acquire and develop most of the academic and employability skills that are listed in Annex 5 of the 2012 Curriculum Framework.

Career management skills specifically (as a subset of employability skills) will be embedded throughout the curriculum:

At Level 4, Studying at University (Modern Languages) and Starting Language Research include an introduction to basic career management skills (self awareness, personal and professional development planning, CV writing etc) in order to get students to start thinking about what they might want from a career and what they might have to offer, and introduce students to a range of research methods for application in units throughout their degree. Additionally, it provides a forum for students to begin researching possible fields of employment and postgraduate study if appropriate. Here students will research organisations, fields of employment and the range of skills, knowledge and attributes required in these. Online materials will be available to support all single and combined honours students in the Faculty.

At Level 5, there will be a plenary session for all students in induction week which will develop awareness of the careers opportunities open to them and provide guidance on researching the relevant skills, experience and knowledge required. There will be plenary sessions for students on the further development of career management skills and this will be backed up by interactive online exercises and website resources related to the subject area. Additional employability activities take place during the Consolidation and Assessment Period (CAP) for levels 4 and 5.

At Level 6, students will be invited to reflect on their skills, knowledge and experience through guidance and activities (Pathfinder) provided during induction week and personal and professional development planning in personal tutorials.

For both Level 5 and Level 6 students we also will run a series of Faculty-wide careers events with employers from a range of relevant employment sectors during the year (including a Faculty Alumni Day).

Work-Related Learning

At Level 5 and Level 6, students will also have the opportunity to take the Faculty-wide Learning from Experience (LiFE) unit. This allows students to gain credit from paid or unpaid work including volunteering, placements, internships, working on research projects for staff etc. We are committed to providing opportunities for students to study a language as part of preparing students for the global labour market and as part of our commitment to internationalisation.

At Level 6, all students will have an opportunity to undertake a work-related learning dissertation/project (where appropriate) as an alternative to the traditional dissertation or research project.

At Levels 4, 5 and 6, we will provide opportunities for students to engage in work-related learning through active learning and the application of skills in simulated work-related environments. Full details can be found in Sections C & D of the Programme Specification Documents.

Single honours Language and Combined Modern Languages degree programmes offer a range of units that explore the application of language skills in professional contexts. These include Language for Professional Communication 1 & 2 (Levels 5 & 6 respectively); Interpreting & Translation Theory and Practice at Level 6.

The units which comprise the optional MFL with ITT pathway, particularly LiFE: Teaching Practice; Professional Practice in MFL Teaching; and the Language Education Research Project have clear professional applications and these are reflected in the learning & teaching strategies and in the assessment strategies which simulate (or are directly located in) the world of work in related fields.

Internationalisation & Global Graduate Skills:

Between Levels 5 and 6, students undertake a period of residence abroad whether as university study or as a work placement. This experience enhances students' employability by providing opportunities to develop essential life skills including problem solving, inter-cultural awareness, and acquiring or improving foreign language skills. Students on Combined Modern Languages spend the third academic year abroad in two countries where their target languages are spoken. Students wishing to undertake study abroad and/or placement based learning are fully supported by a combination of the departmental Placement and Internship Centre, the Year Abroad/Placement Tutor, designated Institutional Coordinators, or the programme Course Leader. Details of what students must do to complete this phase of the programme, where the study abroad or placement learning is credit bearing, are set out in the SLAS Placement Supplement Student Handbook on the Accredited Study Abroad Moodle site (<http://moodle.port.ac.uk/course/view.php?id=3935>)

Degree programmes in SLAS have a strongly international flavour and this feeds into the world of work in the unit Managing Across Cultures. Students can apply what they learn in the unit to employment fields relating to their programme of study. The following skills are embedded in this unit:

- Applying and reflecting on their graduate and employability skills in a real or simulated work environment in an international and cross cultural context.
- Gain insights and learning into the world of work in a national, international and cross cultural context.
- Gain an understanding of how organisations work and how they plan their business and make decisions.
- Gain an insight into how they manage themselves in a range of situations found in the workplace.

The unit is optional on all undergraduate degree programmes in SLAS (Level 5 for home & EU students; Level 6 for international students).
