This course specification provides a summary of the main features of the course, identifies the aims and learning outcomes of the course, the teaching, learning and assessment methods used by teaching staff, and the reference points used to inform the curriculum.

This information is therefore useful to potential students to help them choose the right course of study, to current students on the course and to staff teaching and administering the course.

Further detailed information on the individual modules within the course may be found in the relevant module descriptors and the Course Handbook provided to students on enrolment.

Please refer to the Module Web Search for further information on the course structure and modules.

Educational aims of the course

- To offer students a sound knowledge and understanding of Sociology and Criminology– including theoretical, empirical, and methodological debates within the disciplines
- To enable students to understand and apply key concepts, approaches and critiques within the field of Sociology and Criminology and to develop an appreciation for its contested nature
- To equip students with the skills and the knowledge required to maximise career and postgraduate study opportunities
- To encourage critical thinking about a range of social, sociological, and criminological issues in a global context
- To establish a framework for students to follow a flexible, coherent programme of study, allowing them to develop specialist interests and knowledge in two subject areas
- To provide students with the opportunity to develop the necessary transferable skills for lifelong learning and graduate employment in the context of changing labour markets
- To support students gaining experience and skills relevant to employment or further study within the Sociology subject area by choosing relevant work placement and/or study abroad options
