This course specification provides a summary of the main features of the course, identifies the aims and learning outcomes of the course, the teaching, learning and assessment methods used by teaching staff, and the reference points used to inform the curriculum.

This information is therefore useful to potential students to help them choose the right course of study, to current students on the course and to staff teaching and administering the course.

Further detailed information on the individual modules within the course may be found in the relevant module descriptors and the Course Handbook provided to students on enrolment.

Please refer to the Module Web Search for further information on the course structure and modules.

Educational aims of the course

- To enable students to acquire knowledge and understanding of a wide range of international development issues in the 21st century.
- To provide students with knowledge and understanding of the diversity of development experiences throughout the Global South using a range of appropriate disciplinary or interdisciplinary approaches.
- To equip students with the conceptual and theoretical knowledge and skills necessary to be able to critically appraise key approaches in contemporary development policy and practice.
- To enable students to acquire an informed sense of the similarities and differences between regions of the world, situated within a critical understanding of contemporary global development challenges, thus fostering cross-cultural and global perspectives.
- To equip students with a global perspective, fostering informed citizenship and promoting diversity and respect. This includes providing opportunities for international exchange and work placement, as well as fostering awareness of global ethical practice and social justice issues.
- To equip graduates with the necessary transferable skills for lifelong learning and flexibility in the context of changing, global labour markets.
- To provide students with the skills and knowledge required to maximize careers and postgraduate study opportunities.
- To provide opportunities for students to gain experience and skills relevant to employment (or further study) within the international development sector by choosing relevant work placement/work based learning/study options.

Course Learning Outcomes and Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategies

The Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education \(QAA\) sets out a national framework of qualification levels, and the associated standards of achievement are found in their Framework for Higher Education Qualifications document.

The Course Learning Outcomes for this course are outlined in the tables below.

A. Knowledge and understanding of:

LO number	Learning outcome	Learning and Teaching methods	Assessment methods
A1	Concepts, theories and methods used in the study of international development to the analysis of development ideas, practices and issues relative to the historical and contemporary context.	These outcomes are developed through a combination of lectures, seminars, workshops and tutorials/supervision sessions, and the provision of learning resources. Delivery method varies based on the topics being covered. Students also have the opportunity to develop these knowledges and understandings through optional placement and other work experiences.	A variety of assessments – coursework and exams - are used to demonstrate the achievement of these learning outcomes, appropriate to the particular knowledge and understanding that is being assessed. Coursework includes presentations, reports, simulations and portfolios.
A2	The origins, evolution and contemporary dynamics of international development policy and practice.
A3	The relationship between global processes and local development challenges, and the diversity of the ways that these are experienced.

		The curriculum is enhanced through opportunities to hear from external speakers who are invited to inform on specialist and current issues in the field.

B. Cognitive (Intellectual or Thinking) skills, able to:

LO number	Learning outcome	Learning and Teaching methods	Assessment methods
B1	Construct reasoned argument, synthesise relevant information and exercise critical judgement.	These outcomes are developed through lectures, discussions (normally in seminars and workshops) and via supported independent learning (including training in research methods, and the completion of a major piece of independent research under supervision). The delivery method varies based on the topics being covered.	These outcomes are assessed via examinations, however they are primarily assessed through coursework (both individual and group submissions). The coursework uses an array of methods including presentations, reports, simulations, portfolios, the production of a development index, an extended piece of independent research (dissertation).
B2	Gather, organise and deploy evidence, data and information from a variety of secondary and primary sources.
B3	Identify, investigate, analyse, formulate and advocate solutions to problems.

C. Practical (Professional or Subject) skills, able to:

LO number	Learning outcome	Learning and Teaching methods	Assessment methods
C1	Use communication and information technology, including audiovisual technology, for the retrieval and presentation of information and where appropriate, statistical or numerical information.	These outcomes are developed in particular through informed group discussions and debates, simulations, data workshops, written and oral feedback and tutorial/supervision sessions to discuss this, and opportunities to gain practical work experience through a placement year and/or other periods of work experience.	These outcomes are assessed through a variety of means suited to particular tasks. These include examinations and coursework (assessed essays and reports, simulations, individual/group projects and presentations).
C2	Demonstrate awareness of cultural assumptions, including their own, and the ways in which these impact on an interpretation of others in the context of international development engagement
C3	Reflect on their own learning and seek and make use of constructive feedback

Add additional rows as required.

D. Transferrable (Graduate and Employability) skills, able to:

LO	Learning outcome	Learning and Teaching	Assessment

number		methods	methods
D1	Communicate effectively and fluently in speech and writing. Employers require international development graduates to be able to communicate ideas effectively to a varied audience: this ability to translate complex ideas to a wide audience is a particularly valued skill.	Transferable skills are developed through a combination of lectures, group & personal tutorials, seminars and workshops, presentations, written and oral feedback, individual and group tasks, and guided independent study.	Essays, reports, portfolios, individual and group presentations, dissertation. Opportunities for formative assessment are available at all levels
D2	Become mature, independent learners who can demonstrate initiative, self-organisation and time management attributes.
D3	Collaborate with others to achieve common goals through, for example, group work, group projects, and group presentations. Employers regard collaboration and the identification of common goals highly. This is especially so as public sector organisations and other agencies increasingly work together, and multi-agency teams are developed.
