This course specification provides a summary of the main features of the course, identifies the aims and learning outcomes of the course, the teaching, learning and assessment methods used by teaching staff, and the reference points used to inform the curriculum.

This information is therefore useful to potential students to help them choose the right course of study, to current students on the course and to staff teaching and administering the course.

Further detailed information on the individual modules within the course may be found in the relevant module descriptors and the Course Handbook provided to students on enrolment.

Please refer to the Course and module catalogue for further information on the course structure and modules.

Educational aims of the course

The Criminology and Forensic Studies degree aims to:

- To provide a challenging and stimulating study environment, based upon quality learning and teaching practice.
- To provide a framework allowing students to follow a coherent programme of study within the field of criminology and forensic studies.
- To enable students to study a multi-disciplinary subject and develop specialist interests in key areas of criminology and forensic studies, including the roles and professional practices of forensic and criminal justice agencies, and other statutory and third sector agencies working in the criminal justice and forensic arenas.
- To enable students to exercise choice in their studies, drawing upon the expert knowledge and research of academics teaching in the department.
- To provide an opportunity for students to create and understand links between the disciplines making up the field of criminology and forensic studies.
- To provide students with the opportunity to develop key academic skills, enabling critical thinking, data/evidence collection and analysis, and the ability to undertake independent research.
- To provide students with the knowledge, experience, practical and employability skills required to maximise career and postgraduate study opportunities.
- To provide a broad education presenting multiple and comparative global perspectives on criminology and forensic studies, acknowledging issues relating to diversity, social justice, human rights, and forensic legislation.
- To foster knowledge of criminology and criminal justice in a multi-disciplinary and global context and critical engagement with its subject areas.
- To provide an understanding of the role of empirical research in challenging existing theories and creating new theories.
- To enable an understanding of real life applications of theory to problems of crime causation and solution, forensic detection and the subsequent development of new policies, practices and legislation in a comparative international context.
- To facilitate students understanding of and competence in a range of qualitative and quantitative research skills for exploring crime and its management.
- To provide the opportunity to pursue specialist knowledge and interests through volunteering, placements and research.
- To provide the opportunity to develop transferable skills required for future professional success.

The degree also provides an opportunity for students to gain experience and skills relevant to employment (or further study) within the criminology, criminal justice and forensic sectors by choosing relevant work-based learning modules, placement year or study abroad year options.

Academic Regulations

The current University of Portsmouth Academic Regulations will apply to this course.

Support for Student Learning

The University of Portsmouth provides a comprehensive range of support services for students throughout their course, details of which are available at the MyPort student portal.

In addition to these University support services this course also provides specific learning support tutors for academic skills, including writing and statistics. Personal tutors provide academic and pastoral guidance throughout the course. A placement or study abroad tutor will guide students through these activities. Students on this course will have access to a suite of practical forensic research facilities, also used by Hampshire Constabulary and the Military. Guest lecturers are employed widely across many units, so students benefit greatly from being taught by current practitioners and experts in the field.

Evaluation and Enhancement of Standards and Quality in Learning and Teaching

The University of Portsmouth undertakes comprehensive monitoring, review and evaluation of courses within clearly assigned staff responsibilities. Student feedback is a key feature in these evaluations, as represented in our Policy for Listening to and Responding to the Student Voice where you can also find further information.

Disclaimer

The University of Portsmouth has checked the information provided in this Course Specification and will endeavour to deliver this course in keeping with this Course Specification. However, changes to the course may sometimes be required arising from annual monitoring, student feedback, and the review and update of modules and courses.

Where this activity leads to significant changes to modules and courses there will be prior consultation with students and others, wherever possible, and the University of Portsmouth will take all reasonable steps to minimise disruption to students.

It is also possible that the University of Portsmouth may not be able to offer a module or course for reasons outside of its control, for example, due to the absence of a member of staff or low student registration numbers. Where this is the case, the University of Portsmouth will endeavour to inform applicants and students as soon as possible, and where appropriate, will facilitate the transfer of affected students to another suitable course.
