This course specification provides a summary of the main features of the course, identifies the aims and learning outcomes of the course, the teaching, learning and assessment methods used by teaching staff, and the reference points used to inform the curriculum.

This information is therefore useful to potential students to help them choose the right course of study, to current students on the course and to staff teaching and administering the course.

Further detailed information on the individual modules within the course may be found in the relevant module descriptors and the Course Handbook provided to students on enrolment.

Please refer to the Course and Module Catalogue for further information on the course structure and modules.

Educational aims of the course

- Provide a framework for personal, professional and academic development at post-graduate level for those engaged in or hope to work in the international development sector.
- Provide an opportunity for participants to explore and analyse their personal and professional roles in different policy and practice areas of international development studies including, economics, health, education, gender, professional communication and human security.
- Develop a professional approach to applied research in international development through a consideration of the practical, technical and philosophical dimensions of research methodology and the use of appropriate advanced research techniques;
- Provide a framework in which participants can generate original knowledge to support their own area of international development studies e.g. economics, health, education, gender, international justice and international relations.
- Enable and encourage graduates of the programme to disseminate the results of their research with a view to contributing to the debate or influencing policy and practice;
- Enhance the development of reflective practice through discussion and networking with others who may be working in different sectors of international development.
