This course specification provides a summary of the main features of the course, identifies the aims and learning outcomes of the course, the teaching, learning and assessment methods used by teaching staff, and the reference points used to inform the curriculum.

This information is therefore useful to potential students to help them choose the right course of study, to current students on the course and to staff teaching and administering the course.

Further detailed information on the individual modules within the course may be found in the relevant module descriptors and the Course Handbook provided to students on enrolment.

Please refer to the Course and Module Catalogue for further information on the course structure and modules.

Educational aims of the course

- To enable students to acquire knowledge and understanding of a wide range of international development issues in the 21st century.
- To provide students with knowledge and understanding of developing countries and emerging economies using a range of appropriate disciplinary or interdisciplinary approaches.
- To equip students with the knowledge and skills necessary to be able to critically appraise key approaches in contemporary development policy and practice.
- To enable students to acquire an informed sense of the similarities and differences between areas, situated within a critical understanding of contemporary global development challenges, thus fostering cross-cultural and global perspectives.
- To equip students with a global perspective, fostering informed citizenship and promoting diversity and respect. This includes providing opportunities for international exchange and work placement, as well as fostering awareness of global ethical practice and social justice issues.
- To equip graduates with the necessary transferable skills for lifelong learning and flexibility in the context of changing, global labour markets.
- To provide students with the skills and knowledge required to maximise careers and postgraduate study opportunities.
- To provide opportunities for students to gain experience and skills relevant to employment (or further study) within the international development sector by choosing relevant work placement/work-based learning/study options.
- To provide a framework allowing students to follow a flexible coherent programme of study by combining two subject areas and developing specialist interests and knowledge
- To provide students with knowledge and understanding of the country/countries where their target language(s) is/are spoken using a range of appropriate disciplinary or interdisciplinary approaches
- To provide students with a sound understanding of contemporary affairs in one (single) or two (combined) language areas, with opportunities for specialisation in historical studies (including social and cultural), politics and social science, or business and economics
- To provide all students with the opportunities to develop their linguistic skills in accordance with their needs and with their overall programme objectives - for each target language (TL), the programme seeks to engage students in using the target language for the purposes of understanding, expression and communication in written, oral and aural forms
- Attaining explicit knowledge of the language (grammar, idiom, registers, and vocabulary)
- Acquiring knowledge of aspects of the cultures, communities and societies where the language is used
- To provide students with the opportunity to spend time in a country where their target language is spoken, in order to develop their linguistic and cultural competencies and their knowledge of the societies where their language is used

Course Learning Outcomes and Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategies

The Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education \(QAA\) sets out a national framework of qualification levels, and the associated standards of achievement are found in their Framework for Higher Education Qualifications document.

The Course Learning Outcomes for this course are outlined in the tables below.

A. Knowledge and understanding of:

LO number	Learning outcome	Learning and Teaching methods	Assessment methods
A1	Different concepts, theories and methods used in the study of International Development to the analysis of the social, economic, historical and cultural contexts.	These outcomes are developed through a combination of lectures, seminars, workshops and tutorials/supervision sessions, and the provision of learning resources. Delivery method varies based on the topics being covered. Students also have the opportunity to develop these knowledges and understandings through optional placement and other work experiences. The curriculum is enhanced through opportunities to hear from external speakers who are invited to inform on specialist and current issues in the field.	A variety of assessments – coursework and exams - are used to demonstrate the achievement of these learning outcomes, appropriate to the particular knowledge and understanding that is being assessed. Coursework includes presentations, reports, simulations and portfolios.
A2	The changing political practices, processes and challenges of International Development policies and practices.
A3	The relations between human beings and their sociopolitical and ecological environments at local, national and global levels in relation to development challenges.
A4	The target language, understanding a wide range of demanding texts and expressing themselves fluently and spontaneously.
A5	The cultures and societies where the language is used, acknowledging different sociocultural and sociolinguistic perspectives and norms.

B. Cognitive (Intellectual or Thinking) skills, able to:

LO number	Learning outcome	Learning and Teaching methods	Assessment methods
B1	Construct reasoned argument, synthesising relevant information and exercising critical judgement	These outcomes are developed through lectures, discussions (normally in seminars and workshops) and via supported independent learning (including training in research methods, and the completion of a major piece of independent research under supervision). The delivery method varies based on the topics being covered.	These outcomes are assessed via examinations; however, they are primarily assessed through coursework (both individual and group submissions). The coursework uses an array of methods including presentations, reports, simulations, portfolios, the production of a development index, an extended piece of independent research (e.g. dissertation).
B2	Gather, process and evaluate evidence and information from a variety of sources in different languages.
B3	Identify, investigate and solve problems through lateral thinking to develop solutions, thinking creatively in both practical and theoretical contexts
B4	identify differences in sociolinguistic and pragmatic conventions, reflect on them, and adjust their communication accordingly.
B5	Recognise and reflect on feedback to critically analyse and improve their work

C. Practical (Professional or Subject) skills, able to:

LO number	Learning outcome	Learning and Teaching methods	Assessment methods
C1	Examine and evaluate different interpretations of issues and events relevant to the study of International Development.	These outcomes are developed in particular through informed group discussions and debates, simulations, data workshops, written and oral feedback and tutorial/supervision sessions to discuss this, and opportunities to gain practical work experience through a placement year and/or other periods of work experience.	These outcomes are assessed via examinations; however, they are primarily assessed through coursework (both individual and group submissions). The coursework uses an array of methods including presentations, reports, simulations, portfolios, the production of a development index, an
C2	Demonstrate a critical awareness of the diverse world in which they live, but also the concepts and theories constructed to understand this.
C3	Deploy a range of critical methodologies to analyse and interpret diverse cultural materials, media forms and means of communication extended piece of independent research (e.g. dissertation)..
C4	Use language flexibly and effectively for social, academic and professional purposes both in the target language and in their own.

D. Transferable (Graduate and Employability) skills, able to:

LO number	Learning outcome	Learning and Teaching methods	Assessment methods
D1	Effectively communicate through a variety of formats, and to different audiences both in their own language and the target language; create and produce information and media in an innovative manner.	Transferable skills are developed through a combination of lectures, group & personal tutorials, seminars and workshops, presentations, written and oral feedback, individual and group tasks, and guided independent study.	These outcomes are assessed via examinations; however, they are primarily assessed through coursework (both individual and group submissions). The coursework uses an array of methods including presentations, reports, simulations, portfolios, the production of a development index, an extended piece of independent research (e.g. dissertation). Opportunities for formative assessment are available at all levels of the course
D2	Manage their own learning and projects effectively in a timely and critical fashion while working individually and collectively and critically reflect on their own learning.
D3	Collaborate with others to achieve common goals.
D4	Mediate between languages, demonstrating cultural and plurilinguistic competence.

Academic Regulations

The current University of Portsmouth Academic Regulations will apply to this course.

Support for Student Learning

The University of Portsmouth provides a comprehensive range of support services for students throughout their course, details of which are available at the MyPort student portal.
